Overview of Open Government Data in Taiwan

- PSI law enacted in 2005, no FOIA
- Open Data community events since 2008, key to progression, vibrant and diverse interests engaged, transparency groups rising
- "Open Data Regulation" in draft (as of Jan 2013), cabinet-level support and public consultation (online)
- Public support from all 5 biggest cities
- Industrial-level "Open Data Alliance" in 2013

Data Portals: Ministries

- Ministry of Culture launched 1st open data portal in 2012
- data.gov.tw scheduled on 04.2012, directory-based
