

Document of interest - W3C Seminar

My name is Beatriz Kunze and I would like to subscribe to W3C Seminar "Tecnologias Móveis: seu papel na Promoção do Desenvolvimento Social".

Since 1997 I am a dentist and work providing home dental care in elderly and handicapped people. But I am widely known in Brazil because of my weblog, Garota Sem Fio ("Wireless Girl"), which one I've been keeping since 2003. In the beginning I used to write about Palm applications for dental and medical professionals. But mobile tech has grown a lot and now I write about all mobile platforms, devices, applications and solutions for all mobile professionals. I also have a very famous podcast, Podsemfio ("Wireless Podcast") and soon I am going to start my video podcast.

What was a hobby some years ago now is my second job. My weblog is one of the largest tech blogs in Brazil, with around 300,000 unique visitors / month. In 2006 I was invited to comment in a local radio station, CBN Curitiba, and, last year, to write in the Brazilian version of Windows Vista - The Official Magazine. I also have a weblog in UOL Tecnologia portal, named Profissionais Móveis ("Mobile Professionals").

Now I am frequently getting invitations for lectures for enterprises and educational institutes. Some hardware companies like Nokia and HTC invite me for events worldwide.

Currently I am attending a second graduation school in journalism, to develop my skills in communication. My university is helping me to create events about new media platforms and some award-winning articles in mobile tech and digital inclusion.

All links for my websites, as blogs, podcasts and video podcasts can be found in www.garotasemfio.com.br. My email is bia@garotasemfio.com.br.